INTRODUCTION

There was a time when the Seventh Planet pulsed with life...

Its valleys knew the laughter of humans, its cities reflected the light of the Bright Star, and deep within the Eternal Volcano, knowledge was kept that was older than the memory of earthly kingdoms. Magic and technology were not enemies there. They were two languages of the same mystery.

Yet every civilization carries within itself the shadow of its own end.

When pride became law and replaced wisdom, an apocalypse came upon the world of humans.

The Mrons marched across the battlefields like black columns of unrelenting will. The Harpies fell from the sky like blades of forgotten gods.

The Seventh Planet fell...

But in the very heart of destruction, something still remained that the victors did not understand. The last guardian of ancient knowledge. A dying Merlin. The Humble Bell. The nanoBark. And young Astilus, who was not ready for the legacy of the Dforians that was about to pass through his blood.

This is not a story about the victory of laboratory-made creatures.

This is the story of the moment when another human world dies...

CHARACTERS AND FORCES OF THE SEVENTH PLANET

The Seventh Planet

One of several places in the Universe of All Things where the Human race lives. It was here that humans combined science with forbidden knowledge and created beings over whom they ultimately lost control.

Farosna - Great Warlord of the Mron

Commander of the forces that sweep across the Seventh Planet like a merciless machine of destruction.

Mron

Three-legged, and in some cases even four-legged, beings created in human laboratories. Most of them have three arms. Brought into existence as tools, they became an army carrying doom to their creators.

Torwa - Supreme Commander of the Harpy war forces

A cold and ruthless ruler of bloodthirsty beings.

Harpies

Beings created by humans in the laboratories of the Seventh Planet. They do not possess a defined sex. Fast, intelligent, and deadly dangerous. Thanks to their small wings, they are able to rise upward only to plunge from the sky like the blades of forgotten gods.

Merlin

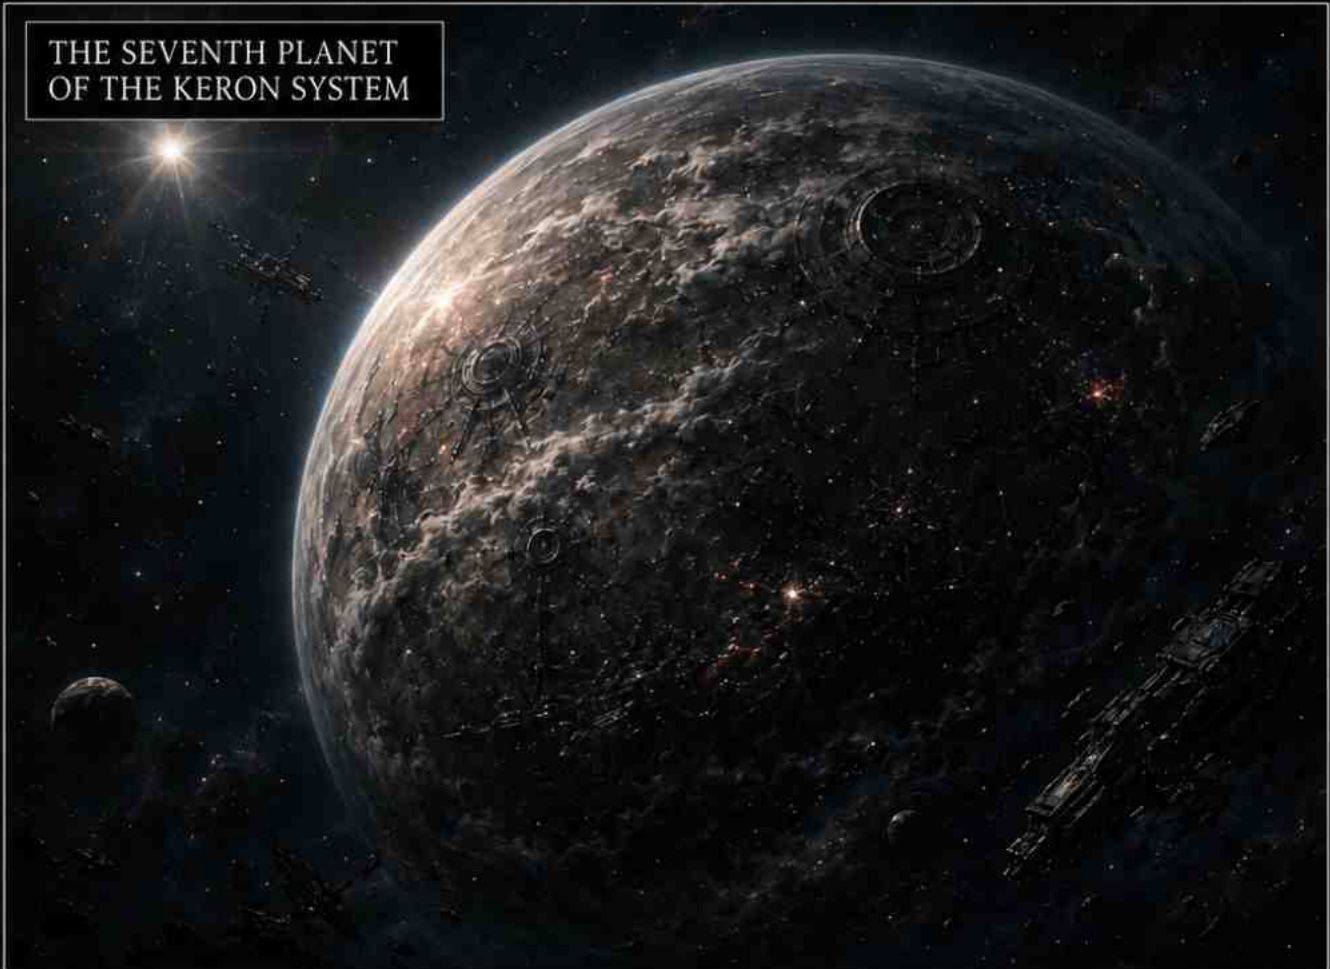

A legendary Old Sorcerer of the race of the Dforians. Guardian of knowledge founded on magic, nature, and technology.

Astilus

A descendant of Merlin. Young, inexperienced, and unprepared for the legacy that falls upon his shoulders. Perhaps the last Dforian in the Universe of All Things.

*The Mron marched across the fields of concluded battles like black columns of relentless will. Above them the Harpies circled, bloodthirstily finishing off
the last remnants of humanity.*

TORWASUPREME COMMANDER OF THE HARPY WAR FORCES

Congratulations, Farosna.
Your time has finally come to an end.

My servant,
in a moment I will be with you.

They served their purpose.
But even this moment
they still betray and lie.

FAROSNA - GREAT WARLORD OF THE MRON

THIS IS ONLY THE BEGINNING...

The Seventh Planet has fallen.

The Mron have seized the land, the Harpies rule the skies, and the last traces of human civilization are vanishing in fire and ash.

Deep within the Eternal Volcano, Merlin is dying —
a legendary Dforian, guardian of knowledge that unites magic, nature, and technology.

Astilus is not ready yet.

He does not understand the power he has inherited. He does not know the true meaning of nanoBark, the Humble Bell, or the mystery of his own origins.

And yet, he may become the final hope of a world
that has already ceased to exist.

Will Astilus manage to preserve the legacy of the Dforians?
Will the young mage escape from the Seventh Planet?
And why are the victors so deeply afraid of the knowledge of the Dforians?

Welcome to the Universe of All Things, where magic and technology intertwine, forming a single, fascinating—and perilous—web of destinies.

Here, beneath the shadow of the stars and the ancient Spacetime Portals, the fate of humanity hangs in the balance.

Meet Astilus—a descendant of the great Merlin and the last mage. Amid the apocalypse consuming the Seventh Planet, he must confront a legacy far greater than anything he is prepared to bear.

Upon his shoulders rests not only the power of his ancestors, but also the burden of questions that may determine the future of humankind:

Should humanity continue to exist?

Can magic save what technology has brought to ruin?

Or are magic and technology merely two faces of the same power—the power of All Things?

The Seventh Planet has fallen.

Beneath the Bright Star, the world of humans is fading away, while the victorious armies of the Mrons and the Harpies take control of the ruins of civilization. At the heart of the Eternal Volcano, Merlin is dying — the last guardian of knowledge, magic, and technology that must not fall into the hands of the victors.

Astilus Is Not Ready Yet.

He does not understand the power he has inherited. He does not know what the Humble Bell truly is. And yet he becomes the last hope for saving the legacy of the Seventh Planet.

"The Seventh Planet" is the first comic in the CyberBeing Saga universe — a story about the fall of a world, Merlin's legacy, the union of magic and technology, and the birth of a hero who is only beginning to learn his own power.

In This Book You Will Find:

dark science fantasy, the fall of a civilization, Harpies, Mrons, nanoDrone 1410, the Humble Bell, nanoBark, the Eternal Volcano, and the beginning of Astilus's journey.
